Anti- Bullying Campaign

This term, our focus is on being an upstander and tackling forms of bullying by standing up and speaking out, so that all members of our LPS community and wider community can feel safe.

This month is Islamophobia awareness month. We must ensure that as a school community, we are inclusive to all faiths and beliefs, and that we treat others how we would like to be treated. Remember, that being targeted for your faith is never acceptable and you deserve to feel safe and happy in school. This behaviour can be truly damaging and can affect someone for the rest of their life. Make sure that you are an Upstander to all forms of bullying behaviour.

Anti- Bullying Campaign

In 2018, a record number of students were excluded from school for racist incidents (The Guardian, 2018). Religious hate crime rose by 40% in England and Wales in 2017/18 and more than half of these hate crimes were directed towards Muslims (The Independent, 2018). We know that young people can be influenced by the views of those around them, including parents, other adults and internet sources. If young people are surrounded by prejudiced opinions, they are more likely to pick up these views and act on them in school. It is therefore paramount that we promote acceptance, celebrate different identities within schools and educate young people to be an 'Upstander' to stereotypes and prejudice.

Why is it important to challenge misconceptions and create a safe space for all regardless of their faiths or beliefs?

Anti- Bullying Campaign

You may hear harmful language in school, in the community and even at home which targets Muslims or another religion. Sometimes it can be hard to challenge this, especially if it's from a friend or family member. Here are some helpful tips on how to challenge this harmful behaviour in a safe way:

A lot of Islamophobia stems from misconceptions about the faith which is spread through prejudice views. What stereotypes (both extreme and everyday) can you think of? Where might they stem from? How are they harmful?

If you hear this directed at someone, make sure you offer your support to that person and let them know that you don't agree with this behaviour and that they are not alone.

Remember, Islamophobia is a hate crime as defined under The Equality Act 2010 and you can report this to the police.

Try to spread positivity wherever you are - in school, at home and in your community. Be the change you want to see in the world. Positivity is the best counter for negativity and if we refuse to give prejudiced views attention and a platform, we can remove some of their influence.

If you feel comfortable and safe to do so, remind the person that it's wrong to generalise an entire religion based on the actions of a few. Ask them how they would feel if they were judged based on the actions of others?
